The New York Tribune indorses him as one of the most careful of his tribe, and a keen and unprejudiced political observer, and quotes in evidence from a notable letter on the tendencies of the Democratic party in the last congress, in the course of which General Boynton insists "that nothing but a fear that extreme measures would

Beyond any question, it is the fixed pur-pose of the Democrats, as soon as they have control of both branches of congress, to claim places in the army for ex-rebels, to place them on the pension-rolls, to admit them to the national military asylums, and, in short, to give them a full share in whatever the nation has done, or is doing, for Union soldiers or their heirs.

settled part of the Democratic plan. There is not the shadow of a foundation for the above to rest upon. General Boynton cannot name twenty, no, not ten men in either house that have been, are, or are likely to be in favor of such crazy ideas. The army is safe so far as the Democratic party is concerned. The ex-Confederate officers are all provided for-some of them poorly enough, to be sure; still, they are independent-and have no desire to return to army life. They would not if they could. And as to the southern claims question, that was sufficiently contradicted by the action of congress and the speeches of leading members, who showed plainly from the public records that, so far from there being a bugaboo of southern claims, the demands of our section in that regard were millions below those preferred the army and southern claims are that the Democratic party has made a record that no amount of speculation by the honest General Boynton can disturb. > SINCE the passage of the remonetization act the coinage of silver has amounted to about $8,500,000, and to meet the demand in the east for small coin, the Philadelphia mint coined more than $200,000 in quarter eagles. and $110,000 in three-dollar pieces. About $4,000,000 in silver has been exported from San Francisco to China during the last two months. The mints are now closed for the annual settlement, which will be completed by the third of July. The mints will be reopened on the fifth of July, after which, if there is no difficulty in procuring the necessary bullion, the coinage of silver dollars will be about $3,000,000 per month, in addition to the usual gold coinage, and most of it, we suggest, should be in small change.

> > New York has become a stationary city: that is, it has ceased to grow. In 1877 the assessed value of real estate was $895,063,933, whereas this year it is set down at $900,855,-700, showing an increase of only $5,791,767. But of this the Herald says that it is misleading, because, rightly viewed, these figures indicate a decline. It appears from the report of the tax commissioners that new buildings, and alterations of old buildings have been made within the year to the amount of $16, 574,539. The increase of real estate valuations should have been at least equal to this amount, and the fact that it has fallen short of it by more than ten million dollars proves an actual decline in the value of previously existing real estate.

Here one of the Enquirer correspondents, who had lingered after the convention, found him to-day, looking remarkably well, and discoursing on political matters in remarkably good spirits.

"The Enquirer, would be glad to have your views, senator, upon the platform adopted on Wednesday, as well as upon the prospects of he party for success this fall."

"The doctrinal part of the platform," he uid, "is substantially the same as the platform of last year. I have never seen a Democrat in Ohio who found fault with that platform, and I don't think that any fault will be found with this. I don't see why you ask for my opinions, for they are well enough known to every one who has paid attention to my speeches and votes. For instance, I spoke and voted against the resumption act when it passed the senate. I have repeatedly spoken against it since, upon the stump and in the senate; and only about one month ago I voted in the senate to repeal it." 'Then as to the silver question?"

I see no good reason why the people should pay the banks more than twenty million dollars a year for the use of bank notes when Territory, and great inflation would take banks to retire, in whole or in part, their cir-
